

The Penguin

The penguin is a black and white bird. It lives in the Antarctica.

The penguin has feathers like a bird but it cannot fly. It uses its flippers to swim instead. It swims to catch fish. The penguin has thick feathers that help to keep it warm. It stays in a big group to keep warm. All the penguins in the group will take turns to move in to the middle of the group because it is the warmest there. The colour of the penguin helps it to hide from its enemies. It is hard to spot a penguin in the snow and in the water.

The penguin is a very lovable animal. Children and adults like it. Today, penguins can be seen at the bird park. They are often one of the main attractions for visitors.